(a) an order certifying this action as a class proceeding and appointing the plaintiffs as representative plaintiffs for the Class;

(b) a declaration that the defendants directly or indirectly conspired, agreed, or arranged with each other to fix, maintain, increase or control the price of farmed Atlantic salmon and products containing or derived from farmed Atlantic salmon (collectively, “Salmon”) during the Class Period (as defined in paragraph 13 below);

(c) damages or compensation in an amount not exceeding $1 billion for loss and damage suffered as a result of conduct contrary to Part VI of the Competition Act, RSC 1985, c C-34 (“Competition Act”) or such other sum as this Court finds appropriate at the trial of the common issues;

(d) punitive damages and/or aggravated damages in the amount of $100 million or such other sum as this Court finds appropriate at the trial of the common issues;

(e) a reference to decide any issues not decided at the trial of the common issues;

- (f) prejudgment and judgment interest pursuant to sections 36 and 37 of the Federal Courts Act, RSC 1985, c F-7;

- (i) such further and other relief as this Honourable Court deems just.

II. NATURE OF THE ACTION

2. This action arises from a conspiracy by the defendants and their unnamed co-conspirators to fix, maintain, increase or control prices and allocate the market and customers for Salmon in North America and elsewhere.

3. Norway is the world's largest producer of Salmon. The defendants and their subsidiaries—including those in Canada and elsewhere in North America—control the global Salmon market. This control stems from their significant global market share and their influence on the Salmon spot price in Oslo, Norway.

4. Canada is the fourth-largest producer of farmed Salmon in the world. Despite the use of the word “Atlantic” to describe Salmon, this species is farmed in both the Pacific and the Atlantic Oceans in Canada.

5. The defendants and their unnamed co-conspirators control the global and Canadian Salmon market through their market share.

6. The defendants and their unnamed co-conspirators colluded to manipulate global and North American prices of Salmon.

7. As a result of their actions, the defendants and their unnamed co-conspirators successfully raised the global (including North American) prices of Salmon during the Class Period. These price increases not only impacted Salmon sold by the defendants, but also all Salmon sold in North America.

8. As a result, the plaintiffs and the Class suffered loss and damage caused by the conspiracy.

9. Regulators in Europe and North America are investigating this conspiracy.

42. SSF is a joint venture of defendants SalMar and Lerøy, where each owns a 50% interest through a third company.

k. Unnamed Co-Conspirators

43. Various persons, partnerships, sole proprietors, firms, corporations, and individuals not named as defendants in this lawsuit, the identities of which are presently not known, may have participated as co-conspirators with the defendants in the unlawful conspiracy alleged in this statement of claim, and have performed acts and made statements in furtherance of the unlawful conduct. For the purposes of this claim, the term “co-conspirator” refers to any co-conspirator identified by name above and any unnamed co-conspirator.

I. Joint and Several Liability

44. The defendants are jointly and severally liable for the actions of and damages, including umbrella damages, allocable to all co-conspirators.

45. Whenever reference is made herein to any act, deed or transaction of any corporation, the allegation means that the corporation or limited liability entity engaged in the act, deed or transaction by or through its officers, directors, agents, employees or representatives while they were actively engaged in the management, direction, control or transaction of the corporation’s business or affairs.

IV. THE SALMON INDUSTRY

46. Atlantic salmon is the most commonly commercially farmed salmon species. It is easy to handle, grows well in sea cages, commands a high market value, and adapts well to being farmed away from its native habitats. The largest Salmon producing countries are Norway, Chile, Scotland, and Canada.

47. Atlantic salmon is only farmed in a few locations around the world, including Canada. The Salmon industry in Canada and the United States operates as an integrated North American market.

48. Salmon is sold on the spot market and through annual contracts. The spot market for Salmon in Oslo, Norway is the most important benchmark for Salmon prices around the globe. Only one percent of Norway's Salmon production is sold on the spot market, but those spot prices set the baseline for longer-term contract prices across the globe.

49. Since April 10, 2013, the NASDAQ Salmon Index has been used to provide a weekly listing of the spot price for Norwegian salmon. During the negotiations on the development of NASDAQ Salmon Index, the Defendants insisted on a standard spot price calculation, which has made it much easier for them to manipulate spot prices. As a result, sales between Defendants and their subsidiary companies are now counted in creating the weekly index. The introduction of the NASDAQ Salmon Index thus gave Defendants the direct ability to manipulate the market. They used that power to skew and exploit spot price levels that then served as reference points for their wholesale prices.

50. According to Mowi, comparing Salmon prices in markets in North America and Europe shows that "there are clear indications of a global market as the prices correlate to a high degree".

51. Since the beginning of the Class Period, the defendants have rigged the spot market by, amongst others, purchasing Salmon from each other at artificially high prices in order to raise prices on the spot market. There is no good non-collusive reason for the defendants to make limited Salmon spot market purchases except to drive up the prices on that market.

52. The Salmon industry is highly concentrated. The defendants and their unnamed co-conspirators are the dominant suppliers of Salmon in North America and the world.

The Salmon industry is characterized by high financial and other barriers to entry, which were known to the defendants. These barriers to entry, coupled with the defendants' high market share created an "umbrella" of supra-competitive prices causing non-cartel suppliers to raise prices of Salmon during the Class Period.

53. Relying on higher prices set by the defendants, the non-cartel suppliers were able to, and did, maximize their profits by charging higher prices for Salmon than they would have in a competitive market. The non-cartel suppliers' conduct in charging higher prices was a direct response to higher Salmon prices caused by the defendants' collusive conduct and exercise of collective market power. But for the conspiracy, the defendants would have charged lower, competitive prices, and the non-cartel suppliers would have needed to follow those lower prices or risk losing market share.

54. Salmon price increases during the Class Period cannot be explained by an increase in the cost base or demand. The most significant cost input is feed, but those costs decreased over the relevant period. Further, demand decreased around 2014, as a result of the Russian ban on Salmon from several Western countries.

V. INVESTIGATIONS INTO INTERNATIONAL CARTEL

55. The European Commission ("EC") opened an antitrust investigation into the violation of antitrust rules prohibiting cartels in the Salmon sector. On February 19, 2019, the EC released a statement:

The European Commission can confirm that on 19 February 2019 its officials carried out unannounced inspections in several Member States at the premises of several companies in the sector of farmed Atlantic salmon.

The Commission has concerns that the inspected companies may have violated EU antitrust rules that prohibit cartels and restrictive business practices (Article 101 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union). The Commission officials were accompanied by their counterparts from the relevant national competition authorities. [emphasis in the original]

56. In a letter sent to Salmon producers, the EC explained that it had received information that the defendants are “participat[ing in] or have participated in anti-competitive agreements and/or concerted practices related to different ways of price coordination in order to sustain and possibly increase the prices for Norwegian salmon.” According to the letter, the defendants engaged in the following conduct:

- (a) Coordinating sales prices and exchanging commercially sensitive information;
- (b) Agreeing to purchase production from other competitors when these other competitors sell at lower prices; and
- (c) Applying a coordinated strategy to increase spot prices of farmed Norwegian Salmon in order to secure higher price levels for long-term contracts.

57. Defendants such as Mowi ASA, Grieg Seafood ASA, Lerøy Seafood AS, and SalMar filed notices with the Oslo Børs (Stock Exchange) disclosing that their offices had been raided.

58. In November 2019, the Antitrust Division of the United States’ Department of Justice (“DOJ”) opened a criminal investigation into allegations of collusion between the defendants in the Salmon industry. Defendants such as Mowi ASA, Grieg Seafood

ASA, Lerøy Seafood AS, and SalMar filed notices with the Oslo Børs disclosing that they or their subsidiaries had received, or were advised they would receive, subpoenas from the DOJ.

VI. DEFENDANTS CONSPIRED TO FIX PRICES

A. The Defendants Breached Part VI of Competition Act

59. From as early as July 1, 2015 until the present time and ongoing, the defendants and their unnamed co-conspirators have engaged in a conspiracy to fix, maintain, increase or control the prices of Salmon in North America and elsewhere.

60. The defendants and their unnamed co-conspirators carried out the conspiracy by:

- (a) participating in meetings, conversations, and communications in Europe, North America, and elsewhere to discuss coordinating prices;
- (b) agreeing, during those meetings, conversations, and communications, on the prices of Salmon;
- (c) agreeing, during those meetings, conversations, and communications, to allocate production, sales, territories, customers or market for the supply of Salmon in North America and elsewhere;
- (d) agreeing, during those meetings, conversations, and communications, to coordinate price adjustments in North America and elsewhere;
- (e) selling Salmon in North America and elsewhere for the agreed upon prices, controlling discounts, and otherwise fixing, increasing, maintaining or stabilizing prices for Salmon in North America and elsewhere;

- (f) accepting payment for Salmon sold in North America and elsewhere at collusive and supra-competitive prices;
- (g) engaging in meetings, conversations, and communications in Europe, North America, and elsewhere for the purpose of monitoring and enforcing adherence to the agreed-upon price-fixing scheme;
- (h) actively and deliberately employing steps to keep their conduct secret and to conceal and hide facts, including but not limited to using code names, following security rules to prevent paper trails, abusing confidences, communicating by telephone, and meeting in locations where they were unlikely to be discovered by other competitors and industry participants;
- (i) exchanging commercially sensitive information; and
- (j) applying a coordinated strategy to increase the spot prices of Salmon in order to secure higher price levels for long-term contracts.

61. The defendants used opportunities such as events organized in part by third parties to communicate with each other on collusive pricing arrangements. One such event is the annual North Atlantic Seafood Forum—described as “[t]he world’s largest seafood business conference” that has taken place in Norway annually for the past 14 years. It is sponsored in part by major players in the Salmon industry, such as the defendants Cermaq, Grieg, Lerøy, and Mowi. The defendants used “networking opportunities” at these industry events and other similar events to collude.

62. As a result of the unlawful conduct alleged herein, the plaintiffs and other members of the Class paid supra-competitive prices for Salmon.

63. The conduct described above constitutes offences under Part VI of the Competition Act, in particular, section 45(1). Further, contrary to section 46(1), the defendants that carry on business in Canada implemented foreign directives from the other defendants and their unnamed co-conspirators communicated to them for the purpose of giving effect to the anti-competitive conduct particularized herein. The plaintiffs claim loss and damage under section 36(1) of the Competition Act in respect of this unlawful conduct.

B. Discoverability

64. Salmon is not exempt from competition regulation and thus, the plaintiffs reasonably considered the Salmon industry to be a competitive industry. A reasonable person under the circumstances would not have been alerted to investigate the legitimacy of the defendants' prices for Salmon.

65. Accordingly, the plaintiffs and other members of the Class did not discover, and could not have discovered through the exercise of reasonable diligence, the existence of the conspiracy during the Class Period.

C. Fraudulent Concealment

66. The defendants and their unnamed co-conspirators actively, intentionally and fraudulently concealed the existence of the combination and conspiracy from the public, including the plaintiffs and other members of the Class. The defendants and their unnamed co-conspirators represented to customers and others that their pricing activities were unilateral, thereby misleading the plaintiffs. The affirmative acts of the defendants alleged herein, including acts in furtherance of the conspiracy, were fraudulently concealed and carried out in a manner that precluded detection.

67. The defendants' and their unnamed co-conspirators' anti-competitive conspiracy was self-concealing. As detailed herein, the defendants took active, deliberate and wrongful steps to conceal their participation in the alleged conspiracy.

68. Because the defendants' agreements, understanding, and conspiracies were kept secret, the plaintiffs and other members of the Class were unaware of the defendants' unlawful conduct during the Class Period, and they did not know, at the time, that they were paying supra-competitive prices for Salmon.

VII. DAMAGES

69. The conspiracy has had the following effects, among others:

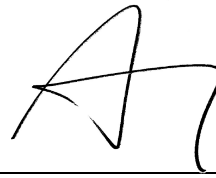

- (a) price competition has been restrained or eliminated with respect to Salmon sold directly or indirectly to the plaintiffs and the Class in Canada;
- (b) the price of Salmon sold to the plaintiffs and other members of the Class have been fixed, maintained, increased or controlled at artificially inflated levels;
- (c) the defendants and their unnamed co-conspirators raised the prices of not only the Salmon that they produced, but also created an umbrella effect on the global and Canadian Salmon market at large, causing loss to anyone in the Class who purchased Salmon in Canada, whether or not supplied by the defendants and/or their unnamed co-conspirators;

- (d) price competition has been restrained or eliminated with respect to the Salmon market as sold directly or indirectly to the plaintiffs and other members of the Class in North America; and
- (e) the plaintiffs and other members of the Class have been deprived of free and open competition for Salmon in North America.

70. Salmon is an identifiable, discrete physical product. As a result, Salmon follows a traceable chain of distribution from the defendants and their unnamed co-conspirators as well as non-defendant/non-conspirator suppliers to consumers or other end-user purchasers. Costs attributable to the unlawful enhancement of the prices of Salmon can be traced through the distribution chain.

71. By reason of the wrongful conduct alleged herein, the plaintiffs and the members of the Class have sustained loss by having paid higher prices for Salmon than they would have paid in the absence of the illegal conduct of the defendants. As a result, the plaintiffs and other members of the Class have suffered loss or damage in an amount not yet known but to be determined. Full particulars of the loss and damage will be provided before trial.

72. The defendants' conduct was high-handed, outrageous, reckless, wanton, entirely without care, deliberate, callous, disgraceful, wilful and in contemptuous disregard of the plaintiffs' rights and the rights of other members of the Class, and as such renders the defendants liable to pay aggravated, exemplary, and punitive damages.
